

Two River Theater is a professional, not-for-profit theater, and one of the most vital and dynamic places to see live theater in New Jersey. Under the leadership of Artistic Director John Dias and Managing Director Michael Hurst, we produce American and world masterpieces, and new plays and musicals. Two River cultivates a new generation of theatergoers through innovative arts education programs that introduce young people to the theater and create opportunities for them to engage with renowned theater artists.

TRT's Metro Scholar Program is a unique opportunity for high school juniors from across New Jersey to learn about professional theater and be part of the work of Two River Theater. In addition to seeing a season of shows at Two River for free, Metro Scholars take workshops and master classes with professional artists, and assist staff in a variety of departments throughout the company. Whether you are interested in pursuing a career in the performing arts, want to attend a university program focused on theater, or enjoy the creative opportunities of working behind-the-scenes, this year-long program is for you.

Since 2005, 189 outstanding students have completed the Metro Scholar program.

Let's get specific:
“What is it that these...‘Metro Scholars’ do?”
you may ask.

Well. We're glad you asked.

The Two River Theater Metro Scholars dive head-first into a professional theater and swim around for a year.

Got it?

Here's the deal:

This year, the program will offer a hybrid (in-person or virtual) opportunity for students to learn about how a regional theater works through various workshops as well as opportunities to work on projects with our artistic, administrative, and production departments.

Metro scholars accepted into the program can expect to receive access to the following benefits and experiences:

- Insight into how a regional theater really works.
- Two subscriptions to our 2021-2022 Two River Theater season.
- The First Day—The kickoff in November includes an orientation, theater exercises and an in-depth tour of the Two River Theater.
- Weekday or weekend workshops led by TRT staff and guest artists, exploring various aspects of professional theater.
- A “coffee talk” after each production, where students, TRT staff, and artists share their feedback on the show.
- The Last Day—an entire day of workshops, master classes and exercises, run by teaching artists and TRT staff.
- Theater career counseling – Education staff, including Director of Education Kate Cordaro, will become a resource for you, and will help answer the questions you may have about colleges, career options and concerns.

And here's what we ask from you in return:

- Your commitment and enthusiasm to attend all shows and workshops, with an open mind and heart. We have an incredible season planned, and we are excited to share it with you.
- Your collaborative spirit and flexibility as we embark on this hybrid program in uncertain times.
- In lieu of formal assistantships this season, we are planning opportunities for Metros to engage with theater staff in a variety of ways. Students will periodically have an opportunity to work as a group on projects with staff to further the theater's work. That may mean that the group will help make props one day, create decor for a gala another day, and usher for a performance on another. Through this program, students will gain exposure to most departments within the theater in some capacity.
- We want to be able to call on you when the theater needs a helping hand – manning the sign-in table at auditions, running lines with actors, hanging posters, attending readings of new plays, lending a hand with opening night; anything that we are doing to make this theater tick, we want you to do too.

We are offering you a once in a lifetime opportunity to make a significant contribution to the life of a professional theater as a junior in high school.

Are you up for the challenge?

Cool cool cool, keep reading!
